Combinations: The senior commons sometimes became hectic as students rushed to get their books and talk with friends.

Days Of Our Lives

... leading into our nights

After the trying days at school filled with studying, studying, and more studying, students yearned for that extra drama that took them away from it all.

Students took advantage of their after school hours and evenings to take them away from the day-in, day-out soap opera atmosphere of school.

They hurried from school to work, athletic practice or home for a snack and to plop down in front of the T.V. for the latest segment of General Hospital or Guiding Light.

Later that evening they would spend their time studying, listening to the latest music on the stereo or primping and getting ready for a party or a date.

Sixth straight win for seniors!

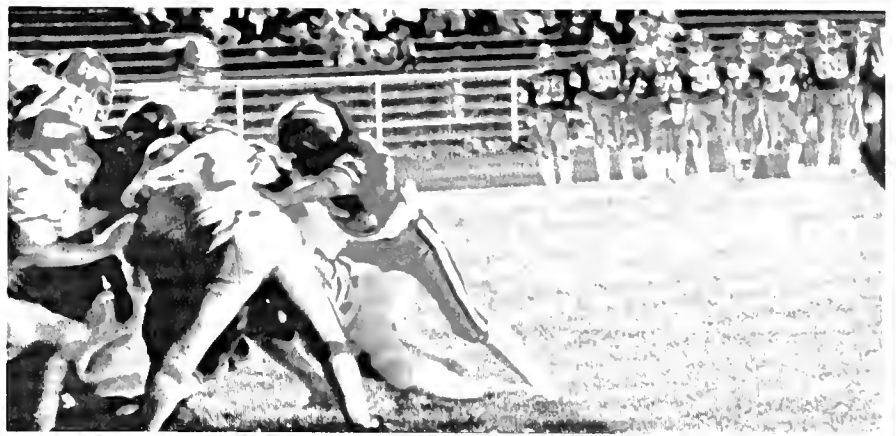

Two events that stood out on this year's Homecoming were the annual Powderpuff football game, which pitted the senior girls against the junior girls, and the varsity football game, with the youthful Scot team taking on Indianapolis Brebeuf.

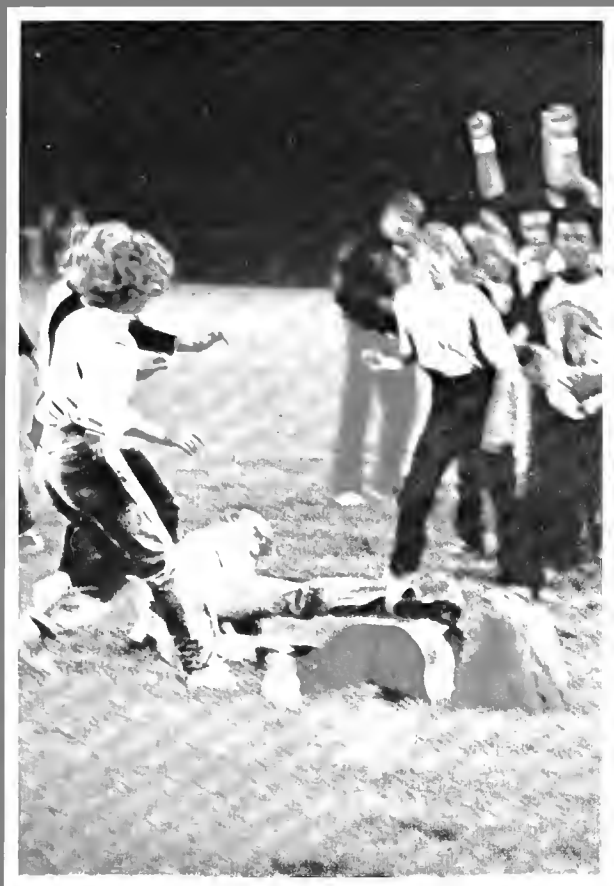

This year's seniors played with more intensity and determination than any senior squad I've coached, said senior coach Ron Brown about the team, who won a hard-fought 12-6 victory. The seniors broke out early with Cassandra Maloney's 80-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage. Quarterback Julie Dunham provided the winning margin for the seniors with a third quarter touchdown.

I was really disappointed. I felt we should have won, commented head coach Dave Edwards about the varsity Scots' 21-13 loss to Brebeuf. Although Highland played a solid game, it was a case of too little and too late. Good performances were turned in by sophomore quarterback Andy MacLachlan, who threw for 167 yards and two touchdowns, and seniors David Dodd and Brent Sanders, who each had a touchdown reception.

Hold that line! The Scot defense makes a strong goal line stand as the Brebeuf team looks on.

24-68 The senior powderpuff cheerleaders show their spirit with a rousing cheer.

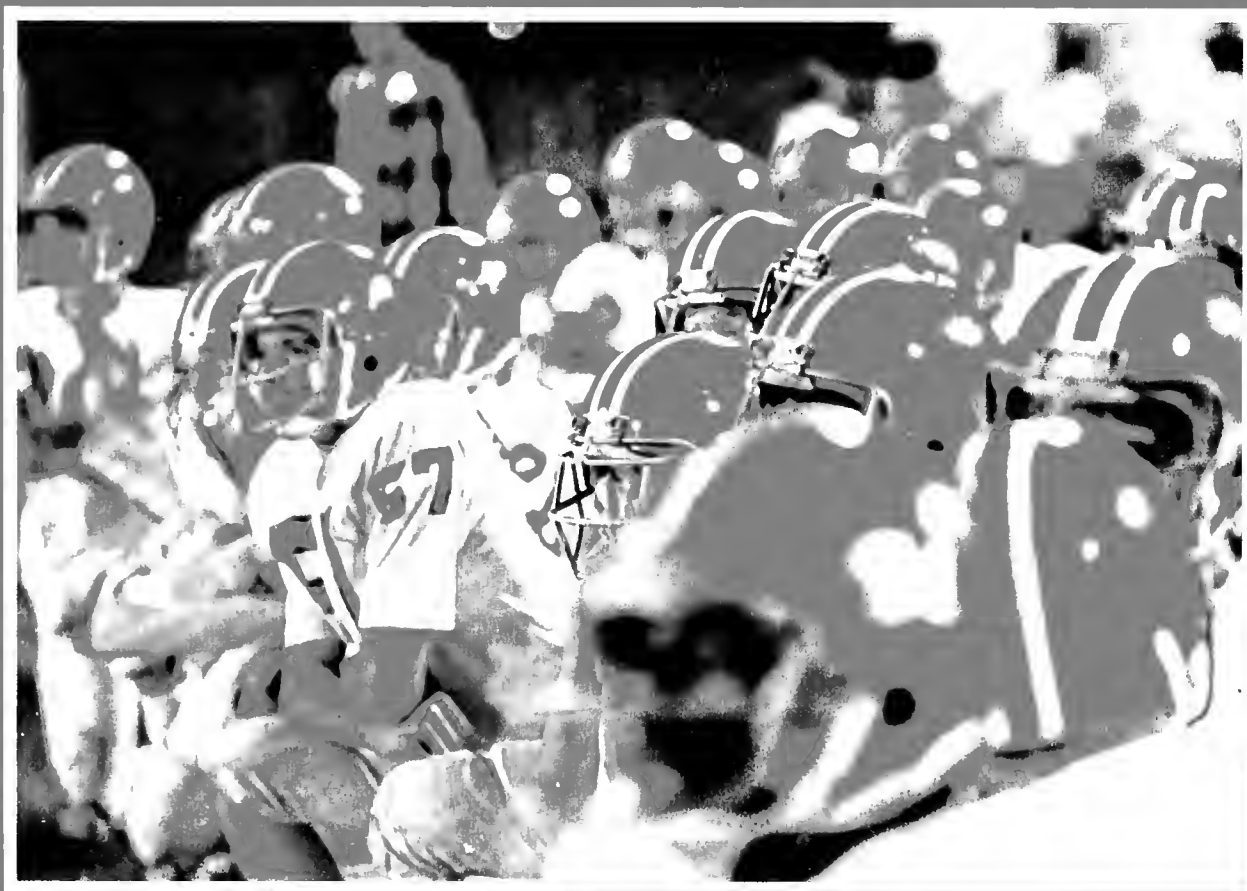

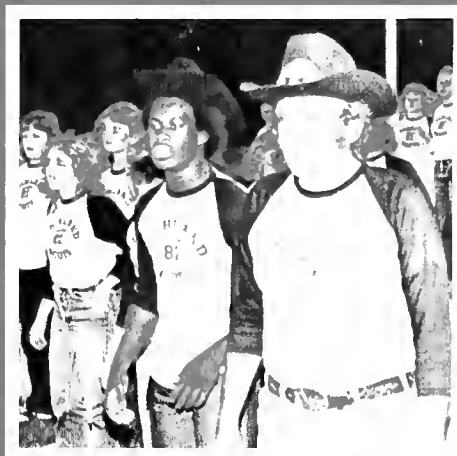

What a play! Senior safety, Dethmer Wenzel, makes a dazzling drop in, pinning running back, Tony Radtke.

Intensity — The seniors face their final, on-field competition. Mr. Ken Bracken and John Woodall, senior, Tony Speed, Jr. Bracken's look on.

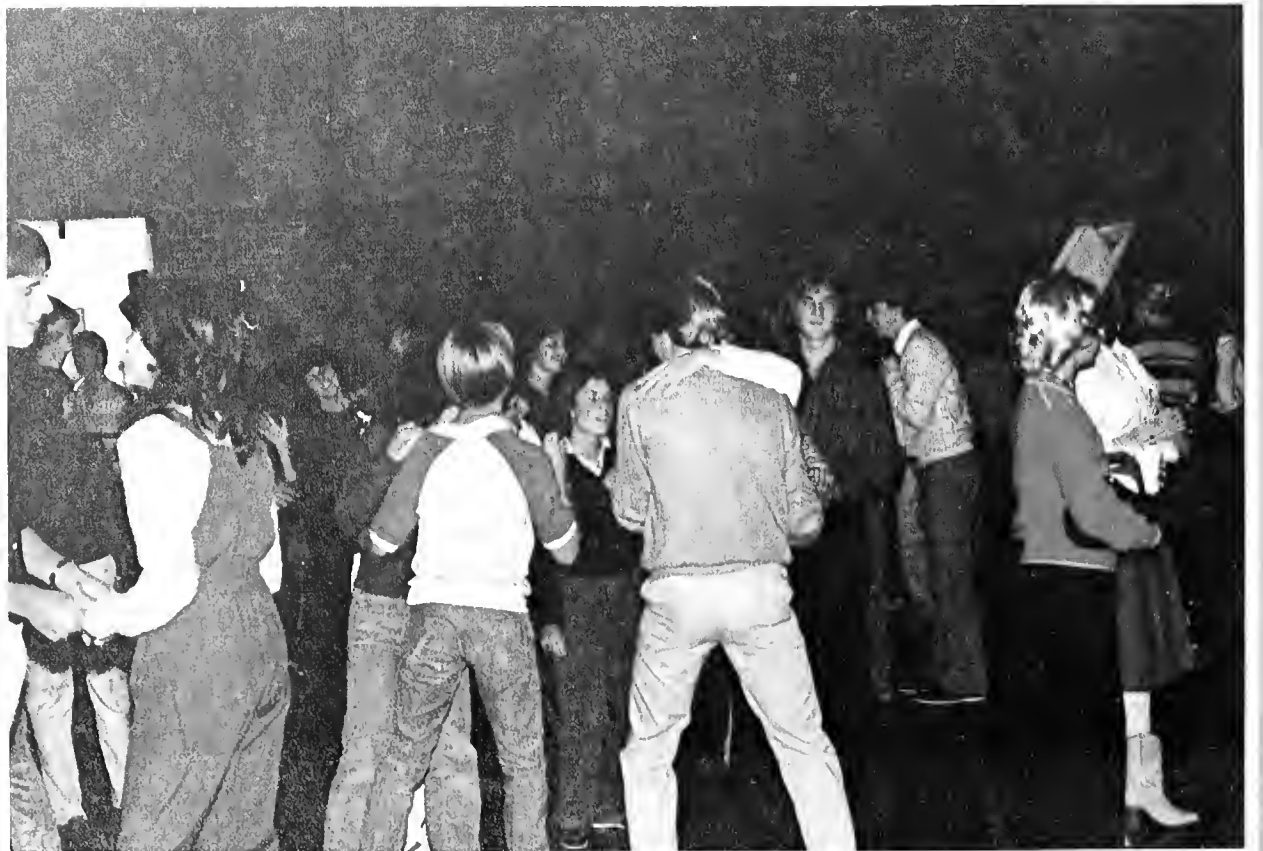

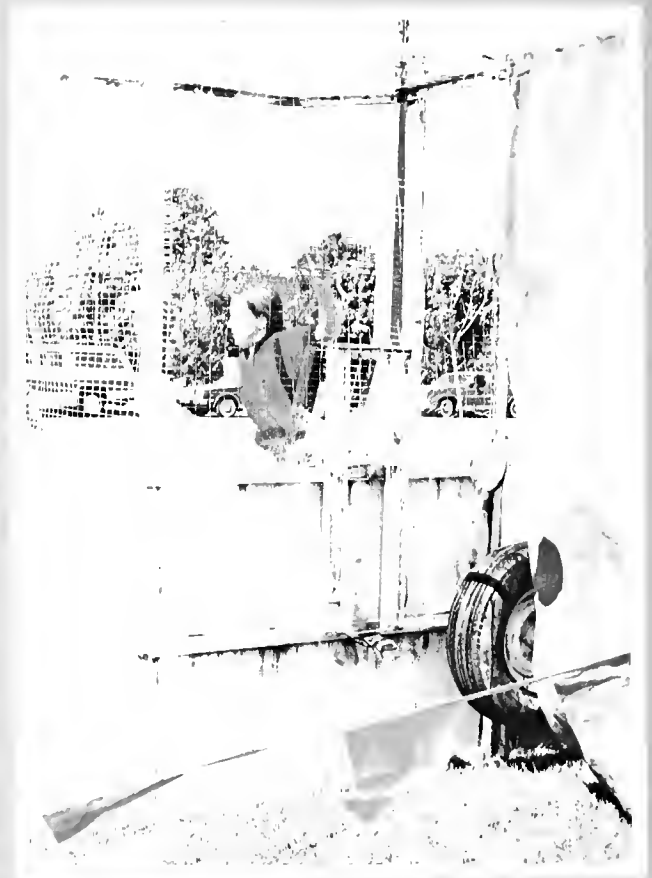

Composure — The last victory in sight, the seniors watch the closing minutes of the game.

Spirited Students: Senior Robin Buck and Senior Phil Travis show off their enthusiasm for Homecoming week.

Boogie Down: to the best was what most Highland students did during the Homecoming Dance.

Help!!! Was Mrs. Cathy Senseny's famous word as she got splashed into the Homecoming week dunking tank.

Changing traditions

A specially organized "Homecoming Week" and a student/teacher dunking tank made the 1981 Homecoming a break from tradition. The week consisted of five different dress-up days which were: Punk-Rock, Hat/Tie/Sock, Sweat, Western and Bum day, respectively.

The dunk-tank set up in front of the circle in 50° weather, gave students a chance to dunk Mrs. Senseny, Mr. Fox and Mr. Barnett for 25¢ every three balls.

"I've never been so cold in all my life! But it was fun being around all the kids and having a lot of laughs," said Mrs. Senseny, as she had her share of splashes.

The traditional aspects of Homecoming were absent because a newly made track was poured this year and no person or vehicle was allowed to walk or be driven on the track. Therefore, there were no floats or parade of corvettes for the queen and princesses to take their traditional ride.

The dance featured the band "Innuendo" with Junior Shelly Baugh on keyboards and Senior Lori Mechem on drums. The band also featured three Highland alumni.

Jill Martin was elected 1981 Homecoming Queen out of a court consisting of seniors: Angie Blackwell, Lori Hussle, Becky Walker, Kelly Moore, and Sherri Alexander. The Princesses were junior Shelly Baugh, Sophomore Kim Shaw and freshman Michele La-key.

Lov'in, touch'in, squeez'in was Junior Shelly Baugh's and alumni Mark Parrish's duet performed at the Homecoming Dance.

... With a yellow bonnet on it, Senior foreign exchange student Lars Rosen-gren helps in showing his spirit for Highland.

The Queen's court was filled with much excitement as Senior Jill Martin received her roses and crown.

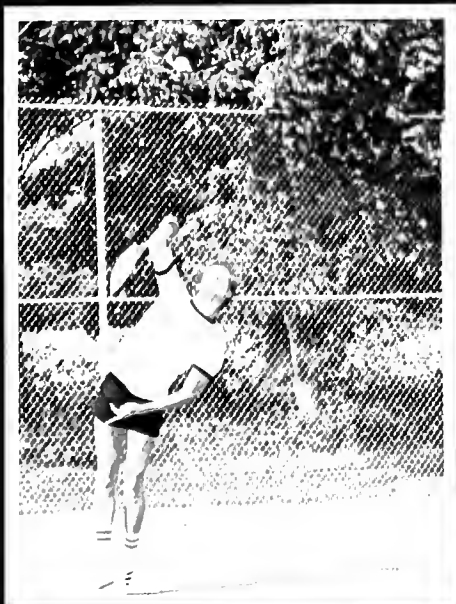

Trembling on the sidelines were the six queen candidates as Jill Martin was crowned 1981 Homecoming Queen.

Staying in shape

Tennis anyone? Senior Benji McCurdy demonstrates good serving form in an early tennis practice.

One and two and . . . Mr. Barnett's sophomore gym class warms up for daily activities with exercises.

Whether it was through strenuous workouts or neighborhood games, being physically fit was an important goal to many students.

Reasons for being physically fit were as varied as the activities students participated in. Junior Cathy Bronnenberg stated, "I feel physical fitness is important because I'm in sports. Senior Beth Hobbs jokingly added, "I think being physically fit will help me catch a guy."

With emphasis on physical fitness weekend dates were no longer confined to the theaters and Pizza Huts. Roller skating, bowling at Coopers and taking strolls at Shadyside were all popular pastimes on dates.

Afternoon football and softball games were popular in the autumn. Neighborhood, church and girls powderpuff provided students not involved in the school program a chance to play.

Some students preferred activities other than traditional sports. Junior Kelli Jack enjoyed dancing at the Junction on Friday nights. Junior Alicia Gooding enjoyed spending her weekends roller skating.

Senior Penny Bauer's favorite sport was bike riding. "Biking is good exercise and transportation but mainly I ride my bike for fun," she said.

Although students were quite involved in physical fitness, there did not seem to be any decline in the number of junk food eaters. Fast food restaurants were major hangouts and students could frequently be spotted munching on Fritos, Milky Way bars and Pepsi in the school cafeteria.

Junior Laura Caldwell seemed to sum up the feelings of many students: "Physical fitness doesn't mean super hard training. It's just being active in things you enjoy doing."

Stamina: Senior Donny Marstall finds he needs plenty as weightlifting is hard work.

Will it go in? Senior Kyle Paschal tosses a layup at Shepherd Park while others look on.

Getting into the music Skate guard Clarence Pride finds rollerskating at Star5-kate both fun and relaxing.

Running in top gear The cross country team frequently practices in the parking lot before upcoming meets.

Lovin' and touchin' Pete Hopkins and Trudi Graddy get closer before school.

Warm Greetings were David Phillips and Jane Turner's way of showing their love.

'Yours until tomorrow, or forever!'

Sad, teary eyes, bright red blushes, stolen glances, notes passed, hugs and kisses, were all symptoms of that common high school condition known as puppy love.

Some took puppy love lightly, but for many who experienced it, it was a serious reality. Sophomore Les Crew said, "It was great when we were together, but breaking up was hard to do."

Sometimes puppy love seemed like it could last a lifetime but for many it was only a moment of their teenage lives. Most of the time puppy love endured for weeks or maybe months, but partners seemed to break up over trivial to significant things like another person, or just being tired of the same boyfriend or girlfriend.

Symbols of puppy love could be found wrapped up in diamond sweet-heart and first promise rings while some couples traded class keys and others bought matching T-shirts.

Some students who felt they needed to show their affections for each other openly in the halls would find themselves in trouble. The first time a person was caught he was warned. The second time he could be suspended.

Mr. Matas, the dean of boys, said, "A student has got to know when to draw the line. I feel it should be shared privately not publically." Mrs. Gentry, the dean of girls, agreed with Mr. Matas, "There is a time and a place for this and the halls are not it."

Showing their spirit — Cindy Dean and Chuck Gold dress up on western day.

Symbols of love were shown through the giving of class rings and the accepting of promise rings.

The good times roll

"People think I'm no good and crazy as a loon cause I get stoned in the morning and drunk in the afternoon." The Charlie Daniels Band.

Partying meant just this to some students while this was not everyone's style.

Students spent their evening time roller skating, eating out, going to sporting events or just having fun with friends.

"I don't need drugs to have a good time with my friends," said senior Sheila Carey.

However marijuana alias: pot, weed, or grass was still a popular habit at parties despite warnings from teachers and parents.

Residential parties were not the only place to party. Other places were the drive-in movie, in the parking lots at McDonald's, the roller rink or just cruising around.

"I don't think my weekend would be complete without a good high," said a senior.

Peer pressure seemed to affect some students while others were able to escape it.

"I get high because my older friends do," said a sophomore.

While a junior seemed very sure of herself, "I do not get high but I might have an occasional drink which no one forces me into. It's my decision entirely."

Alcohol or booze was also popular for a weekend high.

"I'm not an alcoholic or anything I just enjoy having a few beers with the guys on Friday nights," said a junior.

Parents were often concerned but, students were more concerned about Summer fun . . . Highland students take it easy at the Labor Day concert.

"I'd just die if my mom knew, she would ground me until I graduated from college, take all my privileges away and just make my life miserable," said a sophomore who just received her driver's license.

Getting high was also a way to escape from the school routine.

"I enjoy just to cop a buzz for the weekend to loosen up from the week but when school is back I'm back," said a senior.

Some students found this aspect of partying very annoying.

"I think they can find something better to do with their time," said senior Kelli Hatter.

Senior Jackie Moves had one stipulation "It's ok on special occasions (Friday and Saturday)."

Rock-n-roll . . . Road Master gave it their all at the Labor Day concert at the North Drive In.

It's been rough night . . . Senior Jeff Sokol had a great Friday night but a rough Saturday morning.

Concert stubs . . . We all collect them to reminisce of old partying times.

Cruising . . . Senior Jeff Sokol slows over the speed bumps at McDonald's.

Let's get involved

Learning . . . about business . . . about government . . . about religion . . . about themselves; learning by doing and by being involved, was what many out of school clubs offered students.

For many students club involvement meant being with friends, learning about themselves and working on projects.

Senior Robin Wood, a Young Life member said, "It's fun, and you can sit around with friends and talk. They give you a chance to tell about your different views without feeling pressured into talking if you don't want to."

At Young Life, a group of students got together on Mondays to talk about social and Biblical problems as well as to play games and pranks.

Senior Scott Wolf found that Young Life was a way to bring religion into his life. "I find Young Life very enjoyable, I do not go to church on Sundays so this is the closest I come and it is an awful lot of fun."

Push Excell was sponsored by Assistant Principal Wallace McCutchen.

"This was started to make more students aware of educational and personal excellence and making positive contributions to their society," said Mr. McCutchen.

Meetings usually consisted of eighty-five students. Members got involved with elderly, health care and volunteer services.

Senior Larry Pool enjoyed improving himself, "I can try to better myself in educational prospects, through the group."

Campus life was sponsored by Greg Simmons from Anderson College. The group had field trips, worked in Scream in the Dark and had meetings every week, which consisted of discussions and games.

Campus life was a fun evening for Senior Steve Hatfield, "Campus life is fun because I can be with my friends and I do not have to put up a front, you can just be yourself."

Mayor City Youth Commission, sponsored by Mr. McCutchen, taught students the inner government. They had mock trials, tours and sessions to teach them about workings of the government.

The eleven members from Highland were selected through applications by the Mayor McMahn and Sheriff Baldwin.

4-H was another out of school club in which many students spent spare time.

Mr. James Teeters commented that 4-H was a good learning experience.

"The organization itself gives young people leadership experiences while gaining knowledge about a particular project."

Horses was the only area of 4-H Linda Smith found challenging. "It's something to do and somewhere to take my horses."

Junior Achievement was a group of students who learned about the workings of a businesses, the making of projects, and keeping books.

They made mirrors for lockers, car battery carriers, key chains and anything that they thought would sell. For Junior Dionne Patterson it was a way to make money, "Since I'm not old enough to have a job, I enjoy J.A. because they offered to pay me 90 cents an hour for two weeks."

Kung Fu Fighting: Juniors Wendy and Cindy Fox practice their judo moves hoping someday to get a black belt.

Outside the classroom

Dancing drawing, fighting and flying . . . These were just a few of the many diverse talents and interests many students pursued outside of school.

Many students used their hobbies as a creative outlet to get away from the pressures of school and jobs.

Junior Lila Smith felt writing short stories and poems let her release some of her feelings she had difficulty dealing with.

Junior Tim Fritz had similar feelings. Tim enjoyed flying planes because it gave him a feeling of freedom and a challenge. "Flying gives me a feeling of control and a challenge I don't have going to school," Tim said.

Some students talent even provided them with jobs. Senior Leah

Brandon who started dancing at age three gave ballet lessons in her home. Leah felt her talent was beneficial because it was enjoyable and something that provided her a job.

Other students hoped for careers someday in their area of talent. Senior Effren Brown hoped to become a professional boxer. Ranked number seven in the nation in the 139 pound welterweight division, he was also the National Pal champ.

Other students talents took a more passive path. Freshman Brian Cook enjoyed drawing and did art work for the yearbook yearbook.

Although the activities varied, students seemed to unanimously agree that having a talent was both fun and challenging.

Flying high: Junior Tim Fritz maneuvers his plane through the clouds high above the busy earth below.

The Liar teaches comic lesson

Energetic, colorful and most of all fun described the Drama department's fall play, The Liar, presented November 5 and 6 in the auditorium.

Set in Venice, Italy in 1953, the comedy written by Carlos Goldoni dealt with a young man's unconquerable habit of making up lies in the pursuit of love, a fault inherent in mankind.

A new aspect was added to The Liar by student cast members. The students changed the production to portray the lives of a travelling band of actors who have decided to perform The Liar to Italian villages. This dimension allowed the cast to play a dual role.

According to senior Joe Moreland, Assistant Director, the play was a departure from previous plays. He felt it was more lighthearted and happier in nature than most of the drama department's previous productions.

Highland Theater Director, Ron Clark said, "The Liar has much versatility and energy, just like the students performing it."

Despite its carefree attitude junior Lila Smith who played Rosaura commented, "The play was very believable. Rosaura the person I play is intriguing. Her relationship with her sister is very real and interesting. The characters all seem very real."

To make the play more of a learning experience, Mr. Clark organized a day at Mounds Park with the cast members pretending to be on their way to a performance in another village. "The idea is for the kids to feel like the real performers would have felt. If they got wet, dirty or tired from the trip, the show still had to go on," he said.

The fourth hour foods class also participated in the fun by preparing an eighteenth century dinner complete with candelabrum, tablecloths and imitation wine for the cast members. The dinner was held November 4 in the commons area during lunch.

Senior Jay Albright who played Lelio the liar despite a broken arm he got during rehearsal commented, "I feel the whole cast, stage crew and all the drama people worked intensely to make this play a memorable one. The cast has been rehearsing since October 1 and I feel all the work paid off."

Other cast members included seniors Gary Bell, Bruce Tinker, Marcel DeRoover, Bryce Heugel and Mike Swinford; juniors Craig Ranshaw, Andrea Green, John Sloan, Mike Hoak and sophomore Brian Robson.

Merrily on their way: Cast members pass through a ravine at Mounds Park as they portray an 18th century traveling troupe.

Why not?: Ottavio, (Mike Swinford) agonizes when he falls victim to another of Lelio's outrageous lies.

Let's settle this calmly: Dr. Balanzoni attempts to intervene on a quarrel between Lelio and Ottavio.

Put me down: Lelio (Jay Albright) exclaims wildly as Pantalone (Bryce Heugel) discovers Lelio is his son.

No more chances: Coachman (Marcel D'Roover) informs Lelio that everyone has caught on to his lies and won't take more.

It's been a long time: Doctor Balanzoni and Pantalone heartily express their Farewells as each heads home after his travels.

Welcome to our world

On November 10, Highlands doors were opened to all parents, students and teachers eager to learn more about each other and the school itself.

Many parents came to Open House to learn more about the teachers and the teaching systems they use rather than to discuss their child's grades. Although the grades were a main ingredient, parents and students, themselves, were more concerned on finding more possibilities and opportunities that led to the student's future plans.

Unlike the past, the traditional Career Instructor, from area colleges and technical schools, were not present to answer any of the questions a student may have had. "By not having the instructors here, it gave the parents and students a better chance to discuss the child's future with his or her teacher who can lead the child in the right direction each day," commented Mrs. McCarty, counselor.

Instead of the instructors, the Highland Singers and the Jazz Band had two performances so the parents could view a portion of the choral department. The Gymnastics teams, the Science and Art departments and many of the clubs each had representations of their specific departments or clubs to give the parents a good idea of what the school was all about. There were also refreshments served throughout the evening. "We had a big turnout for the event and I hope that we will always get the chance to open the doors up to the parents so they can get involved in their child's education and of the life they intend to lead," said Mr. Paul Johnson, Counselor.

Working Hard . . . Freshmen Greg Ekstein and Jay Harvey are seen here hosting Open House.

Shootin' the breeze . . . Mr. Dickerson talks to two of many interested parents about their child's future.

Let the sun shine in . . . The Highland Singers perform at Open House.

Just Checkin' up . . . Mr. Al Miller discusses class with Junior Debbie Coon and her parents.

Just Hangin' around . . . Highland gymnasts show off for the crowd.

Silence is golden . . . the halls of Highland High School are deserted as the last bell rings and the day comes to a close.

A Christmas celebration

"Dreaming of a White Christmas" was the theme for the 1981 Christmas Dance, December 12, when Senior Diana Gilliam was crowned Miss Highlander 1982.

"I felt it was a real honor to be crowned Miss Highlander. It will give me a very excited memory to look back on when I graduate," commented Diana Gilliam.

The four other candidates, nominated by junior and senior home-rooms, were: seniors Beth Hobbs escorted by Mark Smith, Jill Martin escorted by Tim Alfieri, juniors Shelly Baugh escorted by J.T. Williams, and Tina Riddle escorted by Danny Whitehead.

The entertainment for the evening was provided by Disc Jockey, Dr. "K" Funk (Kenny Marsh) a senior at Highland. He filled the evening with WTLC music and some good "old fashion Rock-n-Roll." The commons area was also decorated, by Student Council members, with Christmas bows, icicles, crepe paper, stars, tinsel and a fully decorated Christmas tree.

Disco Donny: Seniors Danny Zachary danced the night away with his date Angie Blackwell.

Here comes Santa Claus: Santa visits and brings goodies for Seniors Susan Amen, Chris Campbell, Brent Magsig and his date Lori Hussel.

In the end: The 1982 Miss Highlander, Diana Gilliam, puts the finishing touches on the evening as she shares a moment with her escort Greg Smith.

Who will it be?: Greg Smith, Diana Gilliam, Shelly Baugh, Jeff Williams, Danny Whitehead, Tina Riddle, Mark Smith, Beth Hobbs, Jill Martin, Tim Alfieri, wait to hear who will be Miss Highlander.

And the winner is . . . Senior Diana Gilliam awaits intently as Highlander editor Steve Osburn crowns the 1982 Miss Highlander.

Foreign students get americanized

Valkommen, Vienenidos, Welkom, Welcome . . . Although it's written different and may sound strange, welcome is a universal language and is unique in its own way.

Highland hosted three exchange students from three different countries. They came to America bringing their own ideas and cultures while hoping to learn a few of the American ways to take home with them.

Jose Javier Geis came from Borce-lona, Spain, and lived with Freshman Danny Osburn and family. Lars Rosengren came from a small village in Stockholm, Sweden and was hosted by the family of Junior Karen Singer. Marcel De Roover came from a village near Antwerp, Belgium, and lived with former Highland teacher Bob Reeder and his family.

Each gained new experiences and learned a whole new life style during their stay in America. They participated in after school activities and on some occasions made speeches to outside organizations about their home towns.

Senior Lorri Watson said, "I think it's neat to have people who want to come to America and learn more about the people and customs that we have. It's also interesting to learn more about their country and their own way of life."

Unfamiliar faces: Marcel De Roover, Lars Rosengren and Jose Javier Geis spent a busy year in America.

Really?: Marcel De Roover from Belgium seems at awe as he looks through one of the yearbooks in room 16.

Couples share 'Hearts and Lace'

Dimmed lights, soft music and slow dancing was the setting at the annual Sweetheart Dance, February 12.

The majorettes sponsored the dance that was held in the commons area immediately following the Muncie South basketball game.

Five couples were up for the nomination of best couple. The winning couple was Senior Scott Wolfe and Junior Kelli Jack. Other nominees were Seniors Pat Wolf and Becky Walker, Sophomores Mark Gary and Babette Junkersfield, and Senior Jeff Willians and Junior Shelly Baugh.

The theme of the dance was Hearts and Lace and Senior Cindy Isoacs commented, "I felt the dance was a real success and I especially liked the music they played."

Sophomore Tom Wilson said he really enjoyed the dance but it could have lasted a lot longer.

Takin' it slow: Freshmen Greg Eckstein and Janaye Krepschaw wind down with a slow number.

Ecstatic! Couples patiently wait the announcement of the best couple.

City's hardships, hopes prevail

Like every year, 1981 was a kaleidoscope: heroes and villains, fads and farces and tragedies, all flashed before us — then were gone.

But the year also produced moments so singularly its own that they will always define '81 in the corridors of memory: a woman joined the Supreme Court, baseball struck out for 50 days, assassins shook the world.

In America, it was the year of Ronald Reagan, whose popular mandate gave him some striking success with Congress. Abroad, there were historic rumblings in Poland, hunger strikes in Ireland, antinuke rallies across Europe. But in welcome relief from a world of turmoil, there was the royal wedding in Britain — and the promise of an heir come spring.

The difficulty of protecting public figures was further dramatized by a London exhibitionist; in June he fired six blank shots at Queen Elizabeth to show how easily he could have killed her.

Assassination attempts seemed to be very prevalent. The life of President Ronald Reagan, Pope John Paul and the murder of Sadat took Americans by surprise.

The Wedding of the year, Princess Diana and Prince Charles appeared on T.V. world-wide. The event took place at Saint Pauls' Cathedral. It was very elegant with horse drawn carriages and footmen. The bride wore white wedding gown with a 25 foot train.

America survived the tragedies that took the people by surprise.

For 23 months in Atlanta, Georgia young black boys were murdered for no reason. Across the nation the people began to wear green ribbons in sympathy for dead children's families. Wayne B. Williams was charged with two of the murders.

Pandas became parents to a male cub the U.S. has been trying to get Ying-Ying pregnant for years and Ling-Ling accomplished that.

Our city was known nationally for its high unemployment but some how student found jobs and got by.

With inflation high Delco Remy did not help by laying off 4,119.

Expensive: Meis was one of the new stores in the Anderson Mall.

Yah Hoo: The new western Exchange started out booming with business.

Empty: Montgomery Wards was one of the few diminishing stores.

Honk, Honk: Cars found extra space in the new parking garage.

Cold, Cool, Refreshing: The new Chesterfield water tower gave this impression.

$$$$$$: Another new addition to Anderson was the Citizens Bank.

The Guiding Light

Leading us on . . .

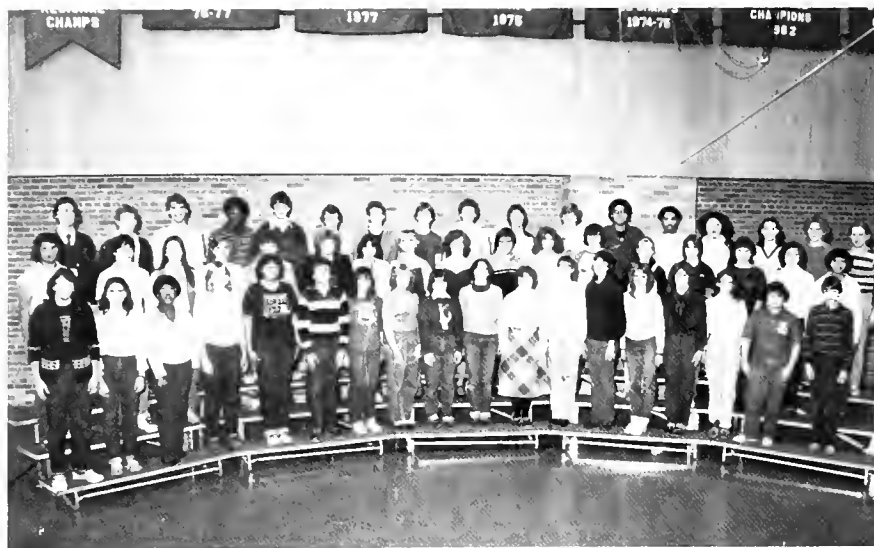

In search of knowledge and enlightenment students found guiding lights from teachers, counselors and within themselves. Motivation and interaction of students in academics and extracurricular activities played an important part of the high school drama.

The history lectures, diagramming sentences in English, doing proofs for math class, reading musical notes in band and the hammering and drilling of industrial arts enlightened some and bored others but throughout the year many diverse lessons were learned.

Another day: Sophomore Julie Willman survives another hectic day of school.

JAWS: Sophomores Jamie Russell, Maria Wynants, Stacy Steans, Mr. Land and Jack York dissect a shark during zoology class.

"... lost in deep thought ...": Junior Randy Jackson works to memorize his

Play it for truth

Simply memorizing the lines is only a small part of acting as drama students quickly discovered. "Getting into your character" is the name of the game. Students worked to understand their character — his feelings and ideas and his reaction to a certain situation.

While first year students began the basic acting skills, advanced dramatists were challenged with deeper character development and advanced scenes. "The enthusiasm is really high, everyone is really putting forth an effort in the productions," said Senior Leah Brandon.

Thespian's involved many students through the two productions "The Liar" and "The Elephant Man". The acting was only a portion as people were needed on costumes, lights, tickets, etc. Many students felt the motivation was high among the group and that everyone had a positive attitude.

A 20-member clown troupe performed throughout the year at schools, churches, and for benefits. The play marathon was unfortunately unable to be performed as scheduled.

Selfexpression with demonstrations

Have you ever wondered how all of those football players could get all of the padding to stay in place and still be able to make a running touch-down or how those drummers can keep their hands going fast enough to last throughout the entire song? That's what many inquiring minds found out about in speech class this year. Speech demonstrations highlighted the class as students shared with one another some special talents or interests of their choice.

Speech contests also brightened up the year as Elaine MacLachlan finished first in the district contest, first in the zone contest and sixth in state competition while Ellen Sauter placed first in district and fourth in the zone competition.

While the speech classes learned how to communicate with one another, Bible literature classes took the students back to the times of Jesus, of Noah and the flood and Daniel in the lions den. They discovered what really happened and why and how it happened. The class involved open discussion, special guest speakers, and semesters projects.

The English department offered a total of twenty classes with new department head Linda Simpson and three new teachers Joan Campbell, Virginia Chapman, Mary Jo Williams.

Doing the finishing touches: Senior Cheri Craig works on her Bible Lit. semester project.

Recording the memories

Newswriting was designed to prepare students for the Yearbook or Tartan staff the following year.

Students also worked at improving their writing skills. "Newswriting has improved my writing a lot. My writing is more concise and organized. That will help me with writing papers in college," said Senior Debby Gallagher.

Students learn about writing stories the first semester and production and mechanics the second semester.

Students who earn a "B" average in Newswriting are then able to choose between the Tartan staff or the Highlander staff.

"The Tartan, newspaper of Highland, is designed mainly to inform and entertain students," said Tartan editor-in-chief, Senior Derek Hobbs.

The editor on Tartan, was Derek Hobbs; assistant editors, Susan True and Lori Crull; sports editors, Tim Taylor and Att Looper. The Tartan staff, was a large staff, with approximately 20 members working on it. Several students decided to work on the staff, when the creative writing class was dropped.

Beyond the basics

The search for that misplaced math assignment or the agony of an algebra test were experiences to which all students could relate.

Although math was only required one year, most students took several courses. Available courses ranged from first year algebra to calculus. In order to take calculus, a student had to double math courses his sophomore and junior years.

The popularity of math was evident by the increased enrollment of 50 people this year. Many students took math just because they simply enjoyed it. Mr. Miller said, "I feel the math department has increased because students realized how employable a math background is."

A common feeling was that math was a necessity in preparing for future testing and college. "I feel that math is important because of how much it affects the future. Almost everything requires math in some form," said Jennifer Price, senior.

In the past few years, students have ranked in the top ten in the state math contest held in March.

Added to the math department staff this year was Miss Barbara Hitz.

Just doublechecking Many times students find that rechecking their work is worth the effort.

But . . . I still don't understand Miss Hitz explains an algebra assignment to Freshman Kathy Williams.

Paying close attention is what these students find necessary in Miss Wilburn's class.

Discovering the unknown

"Biology is a new and interesting experience," said freshman Jenny Hunter. Biology, one of the required courses for freshman, was one of the many science courses offered.

Mr. Pluhar and Mr. Abshire taught chemistry with skill and lab equipment. "A lot is expected of you," said sophomore Brenda Harris about Mr. Pluhar's chemistry class. "It is a good class, you are treated like an adult and everyone is kept on the same level. It's also hard because you could be doing problems and never understand what your answer means."

While dissecting rats is considered sickening by many, sophomore Tammy Gossage felt the make-up of the class is hard, but Mr. Land prepared her well for tests from class discussions.

Many students advanced to the harder classes, like chemistry and physics, after making their way through Biology.

Careful: Seniors Brenda Covalt, Joni Tunesvick, and Keena Lightly mix chemicals for their chemistry lab.

Crusin' but not going anywhere are sophomores as they pretend to drive.

Students, start your engines

"OH NO, THIS IS A ONE-WAY STREET!" Most sophomores share mistakes like these as they struggled through their early weeks of drivers education. Others worried about, "Am I driving too close to the shoulder," or "should I pass this semi or keep it at 40 MPH on the interstate?"

Sophomore Tonnye Kayzer said, "Drivers education is fun and exciting although I almost had an accident."

Drivers education instructor Jim Tee-eters said that when there is almost an accident, in most cases it is not the fault of the student in the drivers education car, it is the fault of the ongoing car.

Department head Ron Harrison said that the purpose of the course was to develop student drivers skills and understandings of all types of driving situations so that they are able to make sound driving judgments. To do this each student had to successfully pass 30 hours in the classroom, 12 hours in the simulators and 3 hours behind the wheel.

Because of the tighter budget, the drivers educational department had three cars instead of five with four students in each car.

Approximately 200 students took drivers education this year.

Project history: in action

"History gives me a better understanding of America's past and helps me understand the world today," said Junior Laddie Sandhu.

Besides lectures and tests, students experienced different activities in class, like creative projects. When studying the American Constitution, Mr. Bill Millers Honors history class were to imagine that they were marooned on a desert island and had to write their own Constitution.

Mrs. Phyllis Norris' classes were busy this year as they participated in Yoga and relaxation, a trust circle, a blindfold maze, and child observation day. Some students also experienced how it felt to be blind, on crutches, in wheel chairs or having broken arms, on two special handicap awareness days. The students did this to gain insight into the special needs and feelings of a student who must contend with these problems for their whole life according to Mrs. Norris.

Approximately 1048 students were enrolled in the Social Studies Depr. this year.

Sweating for a grade

"Five more laps and hit the showers." Sound familiar?

Physical Education was required for freshmen and sophomores, while advanced classes were offered for upperclassmen. Freshmen played everything from soccer to volleyball to medicine ball relays.

Sophomores were introduced to swimming either being placed in beginner, intermediate or advanced swimming classes. "Even though we had to work hard, I had a lot of fun," said Sophomore Debbie Riley.

Students were graded on their participation and dressing for class each day. Also, attitude and skill were a small portion of their final grade.

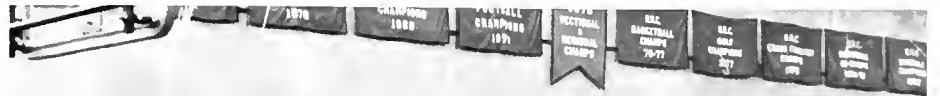

Many of the teachers felt physical education was important in acquainting the students to different kinds of physical activity. "Gym is important for the fact that we hope to show the students the mechanics of several sports," said Ms. Bennett.

The department also held gymnastic and soccer displays at Open House this year.

Up for grabs: It's anyone's ball as everyone prepares for the rebound.

Planning Strategy: Mrs. Senseney explains the finer points of the game to her gym class.

Taking a breather: Mr. Fatzinger gives his swimming class a short break after completing a series of laps.

Art

Close your eyes and relax!

"Close your eyes and relax. Imagine an open window. It is a nice, sunny day. Now, you are floating up, out the window. You are floating up, up and away. You float to a beach. Now, what will you do?"

Art students participated in this creative activity, called centering exercises. Miss Ditzenberger, explained that the exercises were like those that athletes do before a sport to build up skill, awareness and concentration. Art students listened to a story and at a certain point would be released to imagine the ending.

This year, the art teachers tried to get the students to look at things in different, unusual ways by using different techniques of stuffing, shredding, weaving, painting, and by using different colors.

Drawing, painting, crafts, advanced crafts, basic art, advanced art, ceramics, jewelry and photography were the offered classes.

Graphic Arts?: Senior Beth Mitchell paints on graph paper.

"Nice Baby": Juniors Donna Marlo and Trudi Westerman demonstrate how to tub bathe a baby.

Preparing for the future

"Um, Um, good!" was the response of most students who took foods in home economics. The class learned to prepare things like casseroles, meatloafs, molded salads and other main dishes. The Foods 3-4 class prepared a dinner for the Tennis Team to celebrate their outstanding season.

The only thing the students in the child development class could say was "Isn't she cute," to the little kids brought in by the students in the child development class.

Junior Audrey Stennis, who took the class said, "Since I was an expect-tant mother I thought it was a great time to take the class."

The housing class took a trip to different furniture stores comparing the quality and prices of the types of furniture.

The living on your own class had representatives from different businesses, like car dealers, to give the students tips about buying for themselves in the future.

Senior Kelli Hatter said, "I took the class because it prepares you for living by yourself and what it will really be like after graduation."

"Um, Um good!": students in foods class went through the serving line on salad day.

Music

Drums sound off

Band, you may enter the field for competition — for band members this is the moment when all the hard work pays off. Competing in field competitions was when numerous months of preparing music and perfecting marching routines was finally tested.

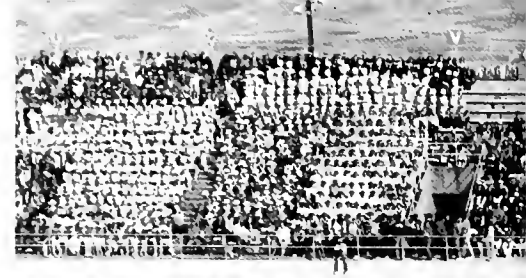

The Marching Highlanders this year competed in the Contest of Champions in Murfreesboro, Tenn. The 230-member band received a Division 2 rating. They also competed at district and state contests, while performing at all the home football games.

A new class, Jazz Band, was added to the music program. The students were able to experience several jazz styles ranging from ballads to upbeat jazz numbers. The 30-member group throughout the year performed for a United Way Breakfast, concerts, and ended the year with Plaid and White.

The class went over so well that it will be included in next year's schedule. "I am glad I decided to take Jazz Band — now I really like the jazz style of music," said Senior Holly McCampbell.

A lot of hard work and time was put into being a majorette. Besides perfecting shows for football and basketball games, they also were involved in several fund-raising projects. The highlight of their projects was the annual Sweetheart Dance. In addition, the 37 girls sold T-shirts and held a fashion show.

Being a member of the basketball band was one good way to show school spirit. The band practiced one night a week to prepare music for each game. The highlight was Senior Night when senior band members took turns directing the band.

Challenging students at all levels was a primary goal of the music department. To do this, the band was divided into three concert bands. The 242 member band was divided three ways, to produce the best instrumentation in each band, while each band was grouped similarly by the abilities of each individual. With similar abilities grouped together, each band could strive to improve themselves, by playing music at their level of competence.

The bands were busy practicing for many performances: winter concerts, spring concerts and Indiana State Contest for all bands, while the Royal Ramsey band held a concert at Eastside to get students interested in the music program, and the Ramsey band, plus a few others from the Symphonic band, Jazz band, pipes and majorettes held Plaid and White.

The sounds of dance steps and singing could be heard if someone happened to be passing by during a Highland Singers' rehearsal.

The selection of Highland Singers is done through audition. The 28 member choir was under the direction of Mr. Tim Williamson.

Their busy schedule included performing at schools, dinners, clubs and Open House. In addition, they competed in the Bluffton Street Fair and the Bishop Luers Swing Choir contest.

The concert choir topped off the year with a trip to St. Louis to compete in a national contest. The 70-member choir also throughout the year performed at schools and convocations.

Learning to harmonize

"We've had quite a few performances this year and they really helped us when it came to doing Musicale," commented Junior Diane Beard, President of Starliters.

The all girls group performed at many area grade schools at Christmas time and also participated at a Christmas convo at Highland. They had shows out of the school at area dinners and social get togethers. They also competed in the first division contest at Robinson grade school.

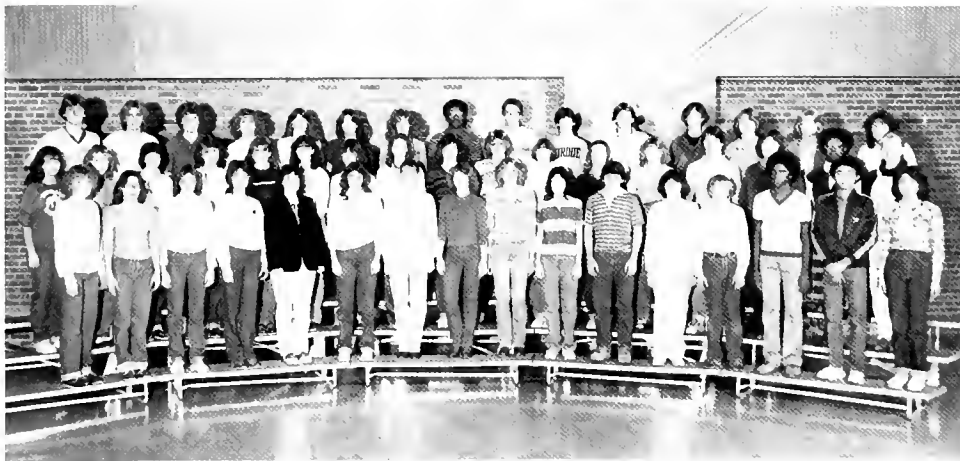

Juniors Debbie Taylor and Cheri Stegall were vice-president and secretary/treasurer, respectively.

The Mixed Choir class was open to any student and required no auditioning. The class was also another selection that could be considered if a student was taking Singers.

"Music is not just fun and games, but more of a strong foundation of learning and performing," said John Parshall, director of the freshman choir.

Even though the freshman choir have only one or two performances a year, the majority of the choir tend to advance to other choirs. "The main purpose of enrolling into the freshman choir class is to get the learning experience that is required for future choirs," said Mr. Parshall.

Greg Phillips felt there was a lot more pressure on the guys to sing since there were so few. "Even though there are a lack of guys in the class, everybody gives it their all and makes it a fun class as well as a learning experience," said Kasey Williams. Lisa Grinstead added that the class breaks the monotony from regular school classes.

Langue et Cultura

The French and Spanish cultures were demonstrated in foreign language classes, not only through the language, but also through various class activity. Skits were performed, foods sampled and holiday traditions were studied. "I like learning how the other nationalities live, it is interesting and it is a change from normal class work," said junior Phil McNealy.

French and Spanish classes performed skits, television commercials and stories of daily life; to show the differences and similarities between their cultures and the United States. Christmas traditions were taught by singing Christmas cards in French. The Spanish students sang Christmas songs and sampled dishes such as Sopapillas and tostadas. "I like eating the food, it is great," said Sophomore Boo Sawyer.

"The hardest thing about a language is speaking it fluently and speaking it in conversation," said junior Karen Singer. The advanced classes had debates and discussions in Spanish on familiar topics and issues.

A foreign visit

Come on guys, do I really have to do this?: Freshman Darren Gray suffers through Latin initiation.

Departing is such sweet sorrow: Junior Norman Means receives a farewell kiss from his mother as he prepares to leave for Germany.

Only a little bit longer: The eight students meet in Sambo's for an early breakfast before leaving for Germany.

What is a better way to learn firsthand about a country than visit it? This is exactly what eight German students and Ms. Claypool decided to do.

The students left February 14 for a month in Germany. Besides attending a German school, there was plenty of time for sightseeing and tours. They all were excited about the trip but admitted to being homesick.

German classes were involved in translating, learning vocabulary and pronunciation. The lighter side found students performing skits and trying varieties of foods.

The German club consisted of approximately 30 members and was sponsored by Ms. Claypool.

Initiation was one of the many highlights in Latin club this year. This wild event was when new members were "welcomed" into the club by present members. "The best part of initiation was the look on their faces – because they thought it was just a party," said Senior Rick Vess.

Latin students were involved in many activities through the year including Latin Day at Ball State and the State Convention in April. In addition, the 50-member club had fund-raising projects and parties. The Latin club sponsor was Ms. Fehrman.

How does this thing work? Sophomores Brian Whitaker and Matt Benzenbower and Freshman Matt Chambers and Travis Clay try to figure out how a lawn mower engine works.

Showing 'em how it's built is Mr. Spears pointing various features on a model out to one of his architectural drawing classes.

Learning the trade

Do you worry that the house you may someday buy is correctly built? Have you ever thought about building your own or using solar energy? These were just some of the subjects that the industrial arts department covered this year.

The department handled a variety of subjects including graphic arts, woods, metals, energy systems, electricity, drafting and architectural drawing. Each subject provided students with the necessary skills needed in the class.

In graphic arts the students learned about the 35mm camera, how to develop and print film and how to print on various materials. The woods class showed students how to use wood to its greatest ability. According to Senior Jeff Williams, they learned the basics of furniture finishes and how to build different items using different types of wood.

Learning to mold metals, weld, and to make tools were some of the things the metals class offered. In drafting and architectural drawing the students designed and developed unique house and building plans which were later put to use.

Some students, like Junior Laura Garland, found that the Industrial Arts Department could be helpful in the preparation of future jobs such as architecture, while others discovered that it was a good way to develop hobbies such as furniture building and photography, while still others, such as Senior Dwight Carr, used the department as a way to pass the time of day.

You do it like this. Mr. Jackson assists Sophomore Scott Richardson as he learns how to work one of the many machines in Metals 1 class.

Let 'er rip! That's what Sophomore Eric Larcum is doing as he cuts some wood for woods class.

Getting to the nitty gritty

Department head Jim Taylor estimated that between 70 and 75 students were enrolled in Agribusiness and about 30 students were employed through the co-op program. Jobs ranged from retail selling to floral designing jobs.

Despite the grim employment situation in Anderson, Mr. Taylor felt employers were generally quite cooperative in supplying jobs for students.

Some Agribusiness students participated in judging contests and FFA activities. Mr. Taylor felt sophomore Brad Carmin was the FFA's key member. Other important members were Mike Waymire, Greg Simpson and Dean Graveel.

The soil testing team placed first in the county in soil judging and went on to district. The dairy judging team also placed high in the county with a second place. Members of these teams included Jo Robbins, Jeff Kabrich, Dean Graveel and Mike Waymire.

Proud winners: Scott Gerringer, Mike Waymire, and Jeff Kabrich proudly display their soil judging trophy after winning first place honors.

Listening eagerly: Students listen intently to Mr. Taylor.

Now pay attention: Mr. Taylor lectures his students on the functions of a piece of farm machinery.

Watch carefully: Mr. Taylor discusses the fundamentals of small engine repair as class members listen.

Business

The world of business

Typing keys, filling out forms, adding numbers were all a part of the business curriculum this year. Classes ranged from accounting to typing with each offering solid foundation for future educational purposes and careers.

Mrs. Deborah Bozell, accounting teacher, commented that by taking business classes now, it offered a greater opportunity for furthering one's education which would prepare them for the business world.

One business student stated that the business department familiarized her with what to expect in college and out in the world of work.

Passing out the big one: Mr. Ray distributes a test in one of his book-keeping classes.

Making hard work fun: Junior Lori Steigell types out an assignment for her typing class.

"That's how it's done alright": Mr. Stecher gives a little chuckle as one of his students answers a question correctly.

Something funny's going on: or so it seems as Senior Holly Eglen practices some shorthand.

Who's that photographer?: Senior Kelly Harless flashes a smile while taking a break in her accounting class.

Look out world

What is a great way to get job experience and still get school credits for working?

By enrolling in Co-op a student can get job experience and still get school credits.

Co-op is a work study program for juniors and seniors in high school.

Some students get the job of their choice and others get jobs at other places. Mr. Taylor, one of the three Co-op coordinators said, "Some of the jobs are easier to be placed than others and sometimes a few students don't get jobs at all but we try to find a place for them all."

Co-op requires students to take a minimum of two classes and 20 minutes of a Co-op study class for a total of three credits for each semester.

Co-op consists of ICE, OWE, ICT ACE and COE.

The areas a student can choose to work in range from secretarial work at Guide Lamp to storage work at Evey's Supermarket.

Not all students get jobs outside the school. Some students work inside and for the school. Senior Nancy Matheney, who works in the school library said, "This is my first year in Co-op and I really enjoy the experience it gives." Another Senior, Tina Turner said, "I work at Delco Remy doing secretarial work and I really think it will help me in the future."

The approximate enrollment of Co-op was 90-100 students.

Let me look it up: Senior Melissa Davis helps a customer at the North K-Mart.

This isn't the right one: Senior Jeff Fuller performs his duties at Fleet Supply.

I hope this is warm enough: Senior Kelly Hamilton prepares for therapy at St. John's Hospital.

Her name is . . . : Senior Beth Parnell works on the records as lab assistant at St. John's Hospital.

Adding the finishing coat: Senior Roger Doty earns credits as he works at Mac's Auto Body.

Takin' care of business: Senior Mike Harvey fills out order forms for Saint John's Memorial Hospital.

Close-up: OEA

"We are met in the spirit of friendship as we prepare our lives for services in office occupations . . . " "Would you like to buy a candy bar?" "CAR WASH - $2.00!!" "I move that we have a Rock-a-thon for . . . " "Come on, you can make it!" These are some of the things that might be heard from an OEA member. OEA? What's that?

OEA, Office Education Association, is an organization that supports Special Olympics and is offered to all business classes in most high schools and area vocational schools. The students involved compete in different business oriented competitions at a district, state and national level. In order to attend these competitions, however, it cost money, and the higher the level of competition, the higher the cost.

State competition, as in previous years, was held in Indianapolis. The students spent three days and two nights in the downtown Hyatt where they competed.

National competition was held in Nashville, Tennessee. In order to participate the students had to raise approximately $200 each.

But competing in events wasn't the only thing the OEA members could participate in. They could participate in a variety of fund raisers for Special Olympics and competitions including candy sales, rock-a-thons, car washes and car-wash-a-thons. They could also participate in the actual Special Olympics competitions as 'huggers' for the kids.

One OEA member from the vocational school said, "OEA not only honors students who have worked hard in developing their business skills, but it also gives them a sense of fulfillment just knowing that they're supporting a good cause."

Messy, Messy!: Junior Shelley Davis removes stencil from a copier in Business Intensive Lab.

Getting things adjusted: are Seniors Mark Gall and Scott McKee.

What does this light mean?: Seniors Kelly Moore and Lori Hussle work on the computer in Data Processing.

Going somewhere . . .

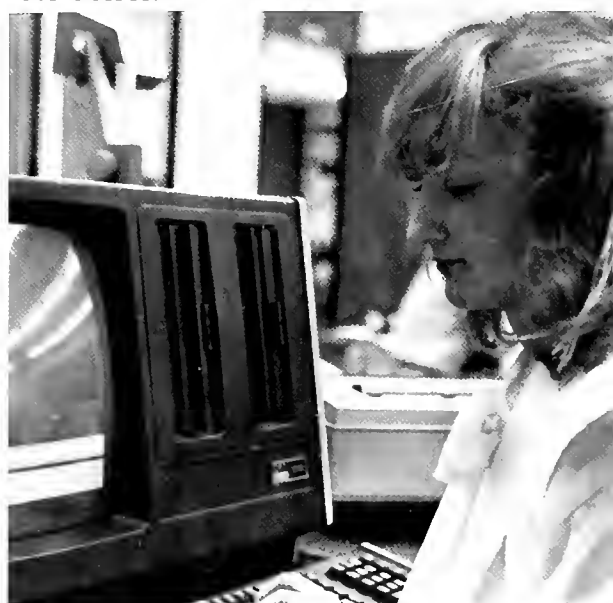

Students may have noticed a few stragglers who left the building either by car or bus each day before home-room or A lunch headed for an unknown destination. Consequently, the destination, Anderson Area Vocational Technical School (commonly known as AAVTS or 'VOC'), was very familiar to the students leaving.

'Voc' offered a variety of subjects ranging from Auto Body to Data Processing, with a number of Highland students in each class.

The classes developed each student's skills by giving them a basic on-the-job training. The atmosphere in each class was created to familiarize the students with the area of occupation they had chosen. It not only prepared students for the world of work but also provided a good, sound background for college. By giving students the necessary skills for expanding their futures in job-related fields it helped them in finding a quality job that could aid in paying their way through college or that could become the foundation for their careers.

'Voc' was offered to all high school students, age sixteen and over, with 120 Highland students attending various classes.

Just look at that shine!: Senior Donny Hooker buffs a Corvette in Auto Body.

"If I had a hammer . . .": sings Senior Todd Davis as he taps out the beat working on a house in the second year Building Trades class.

Gettin' it right the first time: is Junior Kim Reece.

Checking it out!

The Career Center, a two-year program, supplied students with information concerning career decisions and occupations.

Career decision forms were given to juniors and evaluated to supply the student with career ideas to fulfill their interests. There were many references to help the student find a career that satisfied his interests.

The library was closed to students who did not have a pass from a teacher in order to cut down on unnecessary noise and overcrowded situations. However, several students objected to this policy.

"The library is unaccessible to the common student," said Junior David Stark, "If you could get in I feel it could be a good source of knowledge and information."

"I used to go to the library during lunch every day, because most of my teachers thought they weren't giving enough work if you asked to go to the library," stated Senior Lucille Poltrano, "but now you need a pass and I can't find a teacher to give me one all the time."

The media specialists, however, offered special lessons to whole classes who attended throughout the day.

A new video recorder, a 16 mm. film projector, Grzimev's Animal Life Encyclopedia and Survey of Contemporary Literature were a few of the new resources in the library.

Knowledge at your fingertips: Library sources are found helpful to students.

What was your name again? Nancy Matheny asks Nickye Coleman as she tries to find his pass.

Future unlimited: Mrs. Cullop helps students make good career choices in the Career Center.

Young and the Restless

Waiting and wondering

Waiting to enter their final year of high school and wondering what the future holds for them, students mechanically completed the part of the high school drama of attending school.

Seniors gathered information on colleges, juniors anticipated their first prom, sophomores built a stronger school spirit and freshman discovered what high school was all about.

All were young and restless at heart . . .

Say, 'girls': Sophomore Mike Parker goes through the painstaking process of getting his picture taken.

Can I have one: Students trade pictures during French class.

Get rowdy!: The class of '82 shows their spirit at the pep session before the Anderson game.

Chewing the fat: These seniors exchange the day's gossip on their lunch hour.

Future looks bright for seniors

"This years senior class is a spirited and very active group who have shown me that a class can be a bunch of goof-offs and still get a lot accomplished," said Mr. Ron Brown, sponsor of the rowdy class of '82. Senior Becky Walker agreed, saying "Our class has had a reputation pinned on us in the past, but this year we're really working hard to live down this reputation and make our senior year the best ever!"

The senior year — the culmination of four long years of education at Highland — brings back memories for many seniors as they reflect on all the good times they've had throughout their high school years. "The great thing about the class of '82," said senior Mike Boehm, "is that when the works all done, we know how to get loose, party down, and have a good time!"

The class of 82 set new records in the senior sales, grossing over $1000 more than last years seniors. With the profit, the Senior Executive Council had the unique idea of a Highland Scot Mosaic, made of tile, for the gym at a cost of $3000. "The mosaic is a super idea, and it really will be a nice addition to HHS," said Mr. Brown.

Juniors top mag. sale records

"We Bad" was a common phrase heard among the spirited junior class. The year brought excitement as the juniors anticipated prom and almost being a senior. "My junior year has been fantastic and the best is yet to come," said Tammy Baugher.

The annual magazine sale was successful as the ambitious juniors set three records. The records broken were most magazines sold, completion of sales in the shortest length of time, and most money made.

Katie Wetmore was top salesperson while Todd Frazier and Kathy Bronnenberg placed second and third respectively. The television set in the drawing was won by Jill England.

Say "cheese": Class sponsors: Mr. Don Land and Mr. Doug Holder.

Where is his name?: Kim House finds that filing is time consuming.

Leading the junior class: President, Todd Brooks; Secretary, Jill England; Vice-President Jan Joannides and Treasurer, Debbie Taylor.

We've got spirit, yes we do: the juniors show their spirit with banners at a pep session.

Getting in the Christmas Spirit: Kim Ifert decorates the tree in the Home Ec. department.

When J.D. talks, everybody listens: Mr. Dillmon delights his students with another story.

Sophomore moving up

Easing into high school life, the sophomore class began learning new skills and raising money for their future.

Mr. James Brizendine, class sponsor noted that the class was extremely ambitious and anxious to make money for their junior year. The class made some money by selling candy early in the year. A spring carwash was held to make even more for the busy year ahead. Said class president Kelly Fatta, "Some of the money will be used to pay for activities such as homecoming and some we want put in reserve for next year's Prom and other activities.

Two of the biggest highlights of many sophomores year were receiving class rings and drivers licenses.

Noted sophomore Jay Eakes, "I'm glad I'm a sophomore and not a punky little freshman. It's good having someone to look down on."

Kim Shaw represented the class as sophomore homecoming princess.

Though stuck in a somewhat dismal time slot, between the newness of the freshmen and the excitement of proms and graduation which the upperclassmen have, the sophomores managed to attain a year of fun along with high hopes for the future.

Everyone say CHEESE!: Sophomore officers Babette Junkersfield, Treasurer; Jean Johnson, Secretary; Brad Carmen, Vice-President; Kelly Fatta, President.

A beginning: Some of the important highlights of a sophomore's life.

Pigging out: are sophomores Tim Dosler and Brad Carmen as they chow down at lunch.

We've only just begun

The class of 85 stepped into high school as naive freshmen with wide eyes facing their final years of school.

The freshmen missed their first year of float competition because of new homecoming regulations. However they nominated Michelle Lakey as princess.

Mrs. Vicky Bennett and Mr. Rich Dickerson sponsored them and led them through their first year of high school. They helped them design and order their class rings.

The freshmen class officers were President Jay Harvey, Vice President Annie Clifford, Treasurer Michelle Lakey and Secretary Angie Lundstrum.

The freshmen class sponsors: Rich Dickerson and Vicky Bennett.

Smile: Class officers Jay Harvey, Annie Clifford, Angie Lundstrum and Michelle Lakey.

Watch out: Freshmen Cheerleaders, Annie Clifford, Casey Williams, Lisa Grinstead, Brenda Harris, and Michelle Lakey.

Another World

While we strive for perfection

After the grueling and dramatic events of the day, some still strived to prove themselves further by participating in the world of athletics.

The long and sometimes painful practices after school, sitting up till 12 o'clock doing homework and the aching muscles the following morning was what the athlete faced during their sports season.

In their own world, striving for perfection and doing what they did best athlete's became competitor's in the dramatic world of sports.

Inexperience, tough schedule leaves Scots at 3-7

"I couldn't be prouder of the boys. They worked hard for the game and they deserved the victory. This game was definitely the high point of our season," commented head football coach Dave Edwards as the Scots closed a 3-7 season by defeating city rival Madison Heights 16-13.

Inexperience took its toll on the Scots this year, but the young team showed that they were better than their record indicated by winning three games out of their last five, beating Muncie North and Yorktown as well as Madison Heights.

All-conference performers for Highland were Seniors Toby Buck and Derek Hobbs and sophomore David Fleet. Other outstanding players were M.V.P. Jeff Downs and David Dodd, both seniors, and sophomore quarterback Andy MacLachlan.

Scots . . . Lookin' good!

With only one loss to Greenfield Central the Reserve Football team was certainly lookin' good. The season opened August 31, with a 6-0 romping of Madison Hts. Coach Al Lind said that the loss to Greenfield was due to lack of preparation. The game was played soon after a holiday weekend.

Leading the Scots were quarterback Troy Abbott, with his outstanding running and passing of the ball, tight-end David Papai, cornerback Steve Wylam, defensive ends Greg Kardatzke and Pat Stevens. Other outstanding team members were Todd Eppert and George Skeen.

Coach Lind felt that the use of a power offense that challenged the team's offensive line blocking and down field blocking helped contribute to the winning season. He felt there was a need to develop a stronger offensive line and more consistent offensive ball control.

Coach Lind stated "This reserve squad has the best potential football capabilities of any class but they must develop, improve and mature to carry on the success they have experienced in the past." He also said "This team has been a great bunch of athletes to coach."

The Freshman team earned a 6-3 record. Coach Dickerson felt that the entire team did a fine job contributing to their winning season.

"We learned more and more each day, but the team needed to work at being more aggressive on defense," stated Coach Dickerson.

Coach Dickerson was disappointed in the number of guys going out for the team. This year only 21 guys tried out for the squad.

Netters do it again with perfect season

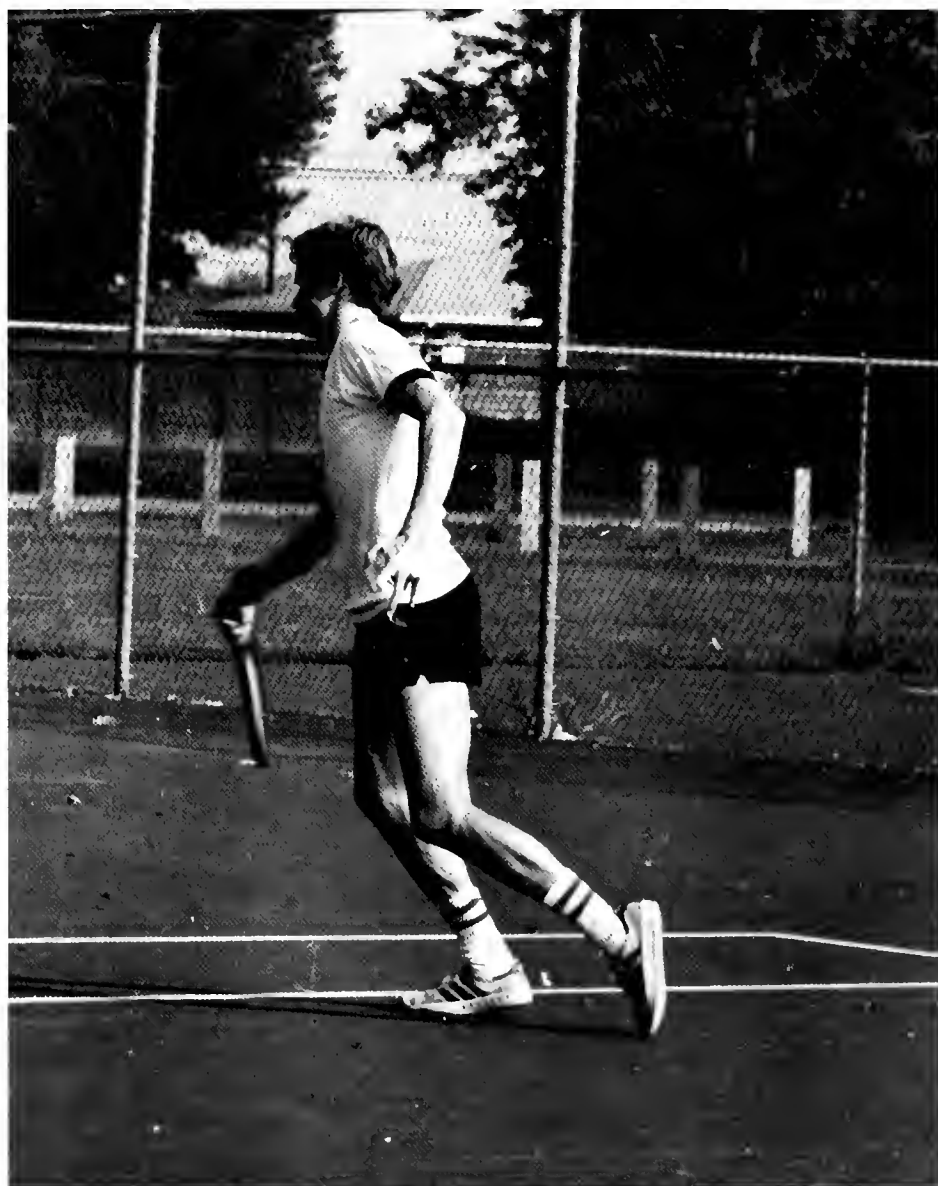

"If not the best, then definitely one of the best teams ever assembled here at Highland," was how six year coach Ron Harrison described this years 17-1 varsity tennis team, which carried its third in the state ranking to the semi-state once again. The team won the conference for the fifth straight year, while also winning sectional for the fourth and regional for the third consecutive years.

The team was led by Senior captain Chris Stokes, who has a career record at Highland of 63-13, while also being named to the all-conference team two years. Senior Ben McCurdy, who has been all-conference four years has compiled a 73-9 record. Junior Tim Smith also played a major role in the success of this years team. He has made conference two years and was this years m.v.p. All three were nominated for the all-state team.

Coach Harrison summed up the year by saying, "The year was just fantastic in all aspects. We were very successful as individuals and as a team, and we took great pride in advancing to the semistate for the third consecutive year. We also were tremendously happy with the win at the Homestead invitational."

This years 11-10 volleyball team was a hard team to beat according to first year head coach Randy Looper. The team compiled a city championship and placed second in the Muncie invitational, defeating the sixth-ranked team in the state twice.

Leading the team were seniors Tracy Tinsley and Lori Crull, who were co-captains. Tinsley was named to all-conference and all-county, and Crull received the best server award. Also leading the team was junior Sherry Fisher. She was this years M.V.P. and was all-conference and all-county.

The future looks good for volleyball, there will be ten returning lettermen, all with playing experience and much determination. Coach Looper said, "I was very fortunate to have the group of dedicated athletes I had this year. They made it a very exciting and successful season."

Lookin' ahead

The 1981 girls swimming team wrapped up the season with a 6-5 record. The swim team felt that overall the season was successful because of the number of lifetime bests.

The strongest point of the season was the medley relay team which consisted of Cindy Erdos, Melissa Page, Kelly Miller, and Amy Swank.

These four girls contributed strongly to the success of the team. Assistant coach Sheryl Meyer commented that the team needed more girls to come out for swimming. Also, this years most valuable swimmer was Kelly Miller and the captain was Karen Brundage.

First in four

The girls golf team finished their season with a 7-6 record, second place in the CAC, and eighth place in the sectional.

"We really should have had a better season this year," said Coach Barnett. "We lost three times by only one stroke, including a lousy one-stroke loss to Yorktown in the CAC."

Carrying the Scots through the season were junior Jeanie Wilson and senior Carol Cook with the final averages of 43 and 50. Jeanie, defeated only four times season, was the first student in four years to qualify for regional.

"The regional was really good experience for me and I practiced hard to prepare for it," said Jeanie.

The team defeated Marion, Anderson and Muncie North teams and came up short by one stroke to place second in the CAC conference to the top rated Yorktown.

The early-season illnesses of key performers caused the team to have a hard time getting untracked. Despite these problems and the three one-stroke losses, the Scots still managed to have their second consecutive winning season.

"We just didn't play well in the sectional," stated Coach Barnett after his team took eighth in a field of 14 teams.

Over the hills and through the woods

"Our team is still in building process," said cross country coach Les Souders. Souders said due to the youngness of the team and lack of experience, the team ended the season with a 2-8 record.

Team captain Donny Marstall, senior, was most consistent throughout the season, being the only four year runner. Donny lessened his time down two minutes over course from last year.

Junior Cary House ran a 17.23 at the Jay County Invitational, dropping a minute from last years time. Junior Brian Rail, even though it was his first season, competed well throughout the season.

"The freshmen were a good asset to the team this year," said Souders. Two out of five freshmen started including Brad Windlan and Brady Reece.

With girls participating in more cross country events, a girls team competed separately at several schools.

"I think it was necessary to have a separate team for the girls," said Souders, "It gives the girls a fair chance."

Team captain Joni Tungesvick, senior, proved to be the most valuable runner, being defeated only once this year. Other top runners were freshmen April Hamilton, sophomore Vickie Maddox and junior Jan Joannides. Other team members included junior Lori Sylvester and freshman Shelly Vest.

The girls competed and lost to the top rated Muncie North by only one point. Souders was satisfied with the first starting season.

AWESOME!

"I knew at the beginning of the year we would be pretty good," said head basketball coach Butch Stafford.

Many observers didn't expect too much from the team which lost its leading scorer and rebounder, Jeff Gary, to graduation.

Few, if any, expected Highland to (a) win the Hall of Fame Classic against Anderson, South Bend LaSalle, and Valparaiso, (b) defeat the Indians a second time, 84-75, on Dec. 19, (c) climb atop the AP and UPI polls and retain the #1 rating for four weeks, (d) present Highland fans with only their third 20-win season, finishing the regular season 20-2.

The Scots were led in scoring by smooth senior guard George Allen who led the county in scoring with his 29.4 average. Allen managed to establish school records for points in a game (47) and a season (648 entering sectional action). He also joined Madison County's elite 1,000-point club.

Such outstanding accomplishments drew high praise from Stafford who said, "I believe George Allen is the greatest offensive basketball player in this county."

Allen's running mate, senior Danny Zachary, averaged 9.6 assists per game and broke Gary Delph's school record for assists in a season (211 entering the sectional).

Senior center Kyle Paschal led the team in rebounding (13.1 per game) and established a new school record for rebounds in a season (287).

Despite not getting the headlines, senior forward Ron Simon and sophomore forward Mark Gary were vital to the team's overall success.

"Ron Simon is so unselfish — he's the glue that kept us together — and Mark Gary is the best sophomore in the state. He's the ideal role player," Stafford said.

"We knew we had the talent but the real key was that we were able to develop very strong team unity," Stafford concluded.

The team unity Stafford spoke of, enabled Highland to win over several state powers in the course of the "Year of the Scots".

Conference champs!!

The girls basketball team ended the season with a 14-7 record. Coach Teeters felt the season was very successful.

The team won the holiday tourney and the conference. They were runners up in the sectional losing in the final round 63-54 to top-ranked Anderson.

Coach Teeters felt the balanced scoring of the team contributed to their winning season. "This was the toughest schedule we've ever had" stated Coach Teeters; They played the states first, second, fourth, and tenth ranked teams. We faced seven sectional winners and defeated four of them.

The team seemed just as good as last year's team but they had a new style. They were led by Seniors Dawn Campbell, the MVP; Joni Tunesvick, the captain. Campbell was also the teams leading scorer. Other key players were Tina Turner, leading rebounder; and Cauliene McCarroll.

Reserves earn best season ever

The conference champion reserve basketball team had its best record ever, finishing at 19-1. "We had 16 different players filter through our team, but the boys were quite coachable and their great teamwork was the key to our success," said reserve coach Bill Wilson. Key players this year were leading scorers Tom Wilson and Tom Chamberlain, both sophomores, and junior Richie Smith, who set a school record with 17 assists against Muncie South.

The freshman teams also had good seasons. The A team had a 10-3 record, closing the season by winning the city championship. Key players were Harvey Davis, Greg Eckstein, and leading scorer Willie Baxter. The B team finished 10-1 and had balanced efforts from all players, according to Coach Bob Stecher. Stecher also stated that working well together and hustle was the reason for their successful season, pulling off victories against New Castle and Muncie Central in overtime.

Tough schedule earns wrestlers 7-4 record

"This years team had a good nucleus of seven seniors and also some all-state wrestlers, but everyone on this team, down to the lowest man, really gave their best effort and that's what made our winning season," commented fourth year coach Al Lind on this year 7-4 Scot wrestling team.

The team was led by senior co-captains Donny Marstall and Jeff Downs with individual records of 15-0 and 15-2, respectively. "Donny and Jeff were real assets to the team with their leadership qualities as well as good records", said Mr. Lind. Another outstanding wrestler was senior Troy House with a 15-2 record.

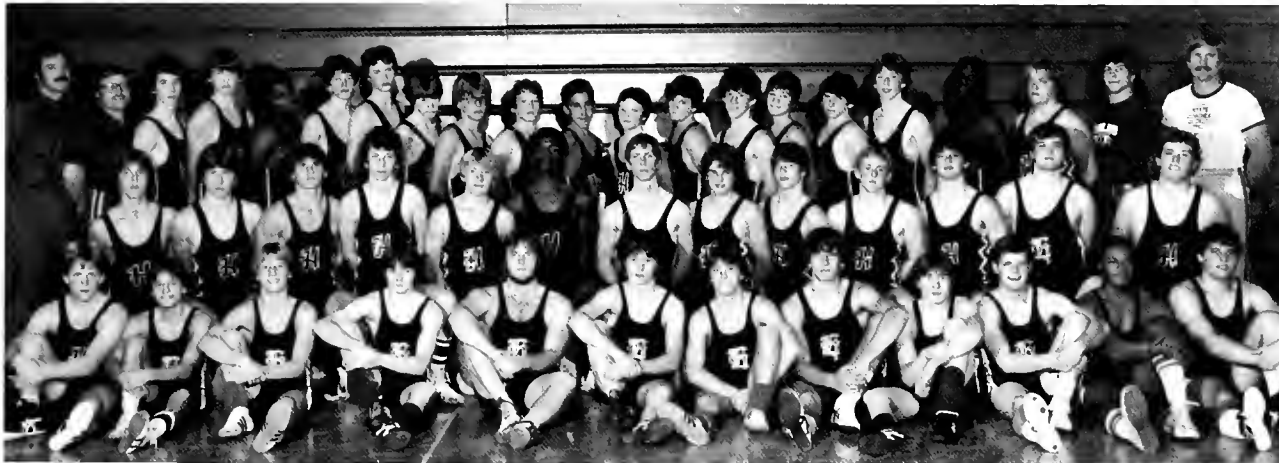

A tough schedule handed the Scots some early losses, among them was number one ranked Delta and number six ranked Muncie South, but they rebounded with strong victories against state-ranked Greenfield and city rival Anderson. The Scot wrestlers also turned in a fine performance at the Madison County tournament, receiving second place and getting individual championships from seniors Donny Marstall, Jeff Downs, and Troy House and junior Cary House.

The Scot wrestlers finished a disappointing fourth in the CAC meet, "With our tough schedule, I feel our wrestlers had an excellent season," said Mr. Lind.

Psyching Up: The Scot wrestlers tune up for their upcoming match.

Heavy Action: This Scot wrestler appears to have the upper hand in this intense match.

They're on top!

The boys gymnastic team earned a 5th place ranking in the state, along with 7.3 record going into sectional, with a very strong chance at a state title.

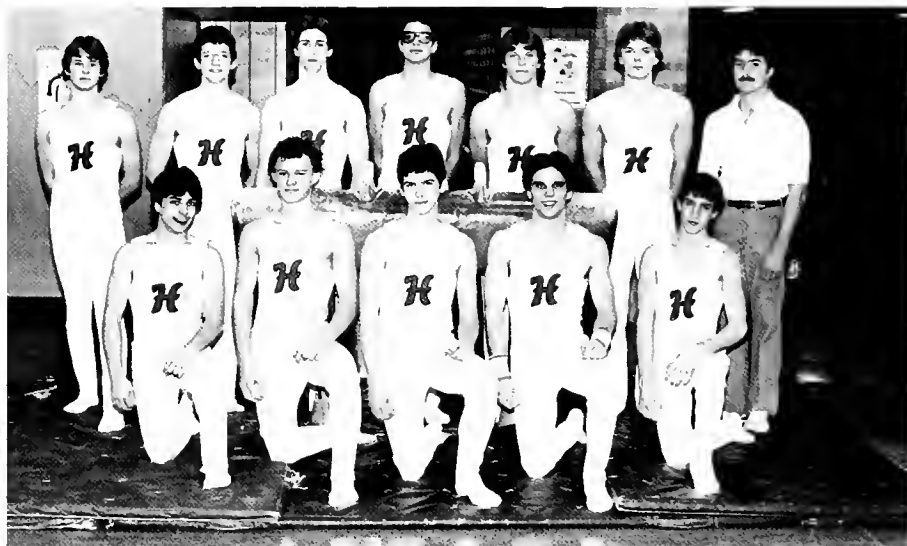

This years team was led by Brian Reed, Brent Reed and Todd Eppert. All three competed in all-around. Brian Reed was ranked 4th in state on floor and 5th in all-around. Eppert was ranked 3rd on vault.

Co-captains of this years team were Brian Reed and Todd Eppert. The team was coached by Noel Gaertner. Coach Gaertner stated, "Not many people realize how demanding the sport of gymnastic is. Our team practices five days a week, three and one-half hours a day and to be really competitive one must practice year round. This years team had the broadest number of high caliber gymnasts Highland has ever had.

Lookin' good — Senior Brian Reed performs on the high bar.

Showin' her style — Sandra White is doing just that on the uneven bars at the Madison Grant meet.

Perfection — Key Word

"This was a hard working group of girls who strove continuously for perfection," stated Coach Dudley, about the girls gymnastic team.

Coach Dudley felt the team had a successful record of 8-2 and several accomplishments. She also felt that good attitudes and discipline of the gymnasts contributed to their winning season. Individual placings and attitudes, not to mention the team's record were the strong points of the season.

Top contenders for the intermediate team were sophomores' Nichole Toppe and Sandra White. Both were all-around competitors. The teams M.V.P. was Senior Brenda Covalt, she was the top contender on the optional team. Covalt placed 1st on the uneven bars all season and was named to the All-Conference squad.

When Coach Dudley was asked about next years team she stated, "With only one Senior graduating the team looks very optimistic."

Stretchin' it out — Susie Weinrich shows perfect form on the uneven bars.

Swimmers have banner year

The varsity swim team, led mainly by a good effort from a strong sophomore class, had a good season, finishing with a 9-1 record and a second-place finish in the highly competitive CAC meet.

Along with senior co-captains Bill Norman and Steve Harney, strong swimmers for the Scots were sophomores Kirk Herod, Rob Weston, Andy Maclachlan, Frank Cox, and diver John Page. "Our sophomores have helped our team a great deal," commented Harney.

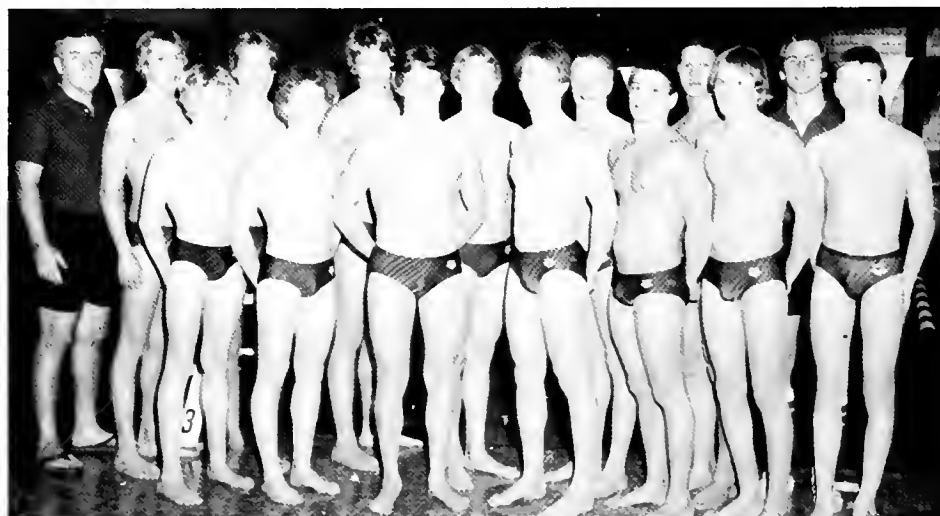

The Scot swimmers had big wins over tough teams such as Muncie South and city rival Madison Heights, and their only dual meet loss came at the hands of Yorktown, the CAC champ. Many records were set this year, among them were Steve Harney in the 500 freestyle, Kirk Herod in the 100 butterfly, Rob Weston in the 100 backstroke, and the 400 freestyle and 200 medley relay teams. "I'm really proud of the boys, and the team is young, so in the future they can only get better," said coach Fatzinger.

The stroke: Showing good form, senior Steve Harney swims the butterfly in practice.

Woosh: Senior Cliff VanSickel enjoys some of the snow by skiing.

Snowmobiling: Record snowfalls gave this Highland student a chance to enjoy his snowmobile.

Jump for it: Junior Scott Blume goes for a baseline jumper during intramural finals play.

Solutions to the cabin fever

How do you spell relief? S U M M E R. This was the feeling of most students about the record snowfall and cool weather. Although we were hit hard, many people found it enjoyable. Skiing and snowmobiling were two of the most popular outdoor recreational activities, while the less motivated might settle for building a snowman, iceskating or just a snowball fight for fun.

The student council sponsored an intramural basketball league which was open to boys in ninth through twelfth grades. Approximately sixty students participated in the fifteen game season which was wrapped up by a single elimination tournament at the end of the season.

No sun but still fun: Freshmen Michelle La-key and Brenda Harris build a snowman after school.

As the World Turns

... money matters more!

Money, marketing and management, these are the things that make the world go round.

Many students were forced to become a part of that situation, in order to meet the rising costs of a Friday night date, or to pay for their fixed-up cars.

Students found jobs harder to find and money tighter as the new Reaganomics plans were brought into effect.

Because of this, many of the styles of dates changed. Instead of going to a nice restaurant and a movie, students were forced to go to fast food joints and watch H.B.O. at home.

Even though the styles of dates changed, dates were still dates, movies were still movies and the world still turned.

CATCH THAT PEPSI SPIRIT

Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co.

1831 W. 18 St.

The Pepsi-Cola Story

The Pepsi-Cola story begins in the year 1896, in a drug store in Newbern, North Carolina, at the corner of Middle and Polick Streets, where a young pharmacist named Caleb "Doc" Bradham, its owner and operator, created a beverage his customers soon began calling "Brad's drink."

In 1903, Bradham officially registered the name "Pepsi-Cola" as a trademark, formed his own company and gradually increased distribution. By 1909, Pepsi-Cola was being bottled by more than 250 franchised bottlers in 24 states.

In those early days, carbonated beverages were considered healthful and even therapeutic. However Pepsi-Cola was simply advertised as "delicious."

Pepsi-Cola was first sold in the 6½-oz. bottle which was the standard for the industry in 1932, Pepsi-Cola Company gambled by introducing a new 12-oz. bottle. Almost overnight, Pepsi sales soared as bargain-seeking, depression-worn America responded to the new size and theme "Twice As Much For A Nickel Too," in what is now recognized as a classic marketing revolution.

In 1939, Pepsi-Cola Company's theme was adapted to a catchy little tune, "Pepsi-Cola Hits the Spot," which was the first singing commercial on radio.

Pepsi-Cola was on the move, under the dynamic management of sales and marketing experts. New franchises were granted outside the county, and business spread so rapidly that in 1954 Pepsi-Cola International, Ltd. was organized. New plants opened at the rate of 30 a year around the globe. By 1956, Pepsi-Cola was available throughout the U.S. and in 90 foreign countries.

Pepsi-Cola kept pace with the changing times. In the 1950's, a produce formula change made Pepsi-Cola less sweet, lower in calories, and a new advertising appeal, "Refresh Without Filling," was aimed at a newly affluent-consumer public. In 1958, the standard package for almost 20 years was replaced by the stunning "swirl" bottle. New forms of distribution outlets were expanded. Packaging, promotion, and advertising and equipment were upgraded to superior standards. The Pepsi-Cola product-line expanded to include Teem, Mountain Dew, Diet Pepsi, and Patio flavors.

In the 1960's Pepsi-Cola Company introduced exciting advertising campaigns that, one after another, captured the public imagination: "Now It's Pepsi, For Those Who Think Young"; "Come Alive"; "You're In The Pepsi Generation"; "Taste That Beats The Others Cold" and "You've Got A Lot To Live, Pepsi's Got A Lot To Give." Diet Pepsi's Girlwatchers campaign became a national popular favorite, followed by "Tastes So Great—You'll Do A Double Take."

Today, Pepsi-Cola is available to more than one billion people in 123 countries and territories throughout the world. Over 1,000 Pepsi-Cola bottling plants serve you on this globe. In the U.S. alone, there are 509 Pepsi-Cola bottling plants. Twenty-five of these plants are owned by Pepsi-Cola Company, but the remaining ones are under independent management and ownership. Pepsi-Cola Company operates on the independent franchise basis whereby local bottlers in contracted areas buy base concentrate from Pepsi-Cola Company and under exacting standards, produce the finished Pepsi-Cola and market it locally. Pepsi-Cola Company, a Division of PepsiCo, Inc., has over 22 million outstanding shares of stock.

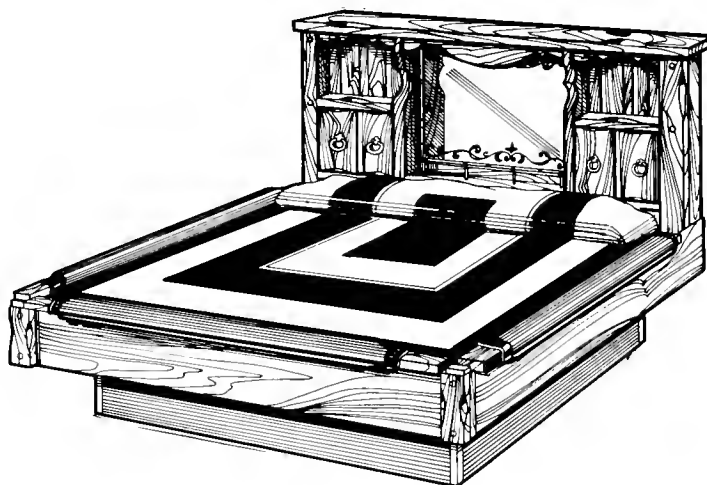

But growth and progress can never depend solely on modern plants, on mass production, advertising and promotion. The continued success of Pepsi-Cola depends on people. Without people there would be no growth, no progress, no world leadership. Without people, there would be no Pepsi-Cola story.

Thank you for making Pepsi-Cola possible!

Spending, spending, spending . . .

Scenario — A typical day in publications class: days were filled with mass confusion and never ending deadlines, arguments and decisions about what to cover and what to omit.

But the most important decision making depended on the publications budget and how much the staff was willing to spend. The cost of the cover, the number of pages and how much color to use was arrived at only after long and sometimes intense discussions over how much money the budget would allow us to spend.

Even though there were disagreements over the spending, this annual was the most expensive and elaborate book to date. The staff did raise extra money, to help the budget, by selling Highland Scots window stickers. Also this annual was sold to the students at a lower cost than last years annual. Sales started at six dollars.

This annual consists of Serif gothic Bold and Bold Italic, 10 and 12 pt. body and caption type. All headlines are Sovenir Demi and Demi Italic, 18 and 36 pt. type. Division page headlines are Brush 48pt. type.

Several variations of layout designs are used consisting of mosaic, modular and mondrian. The cover design was an exclusive die cut for Highland High School consisting of silver metal-lay, black base and cordova grain.

Special thanks to Larry Glaze, Herff Jones representative; Doyle Fox and Larry Russel, Indiana School Pictures; Charles Bennett, color photography printing.

I've had it with you guys, adviser Joan Duc discusses the cover and cost of the annual with the editors, Steve Osburn and Mary Winfrey.

This one's the best: Brenda Browning, Mike Boehm, Suzie Judy and Jim Sims decide on pictures for a sports spread.

Writers cramp: Steve Osburn and Vickie Toombs fill out subscription orders from the days annual sales.

Getting it in focus: Terry Tyler and Tim Bosler focus for a picture using the enlarger.

And what lies beyond . . .

In route to the tomorrows that lay ahead students passed through the oh-too familiar doorways to complete the dramatic soap opera story: High School.

The empty hallways are left alone to reflect the memories of the past year: the cold classrooms; tests that should have been studied for; car keys on the wrong side of the locked door; loud and rowdy pep session; beating the number one and two ranked basketball teams in the Hall of Fame Classic; many friendships and new and lost loves. To hallways and outsiders the memories seem the same as the years past and to come.

But to the individuals who experienced the joys of love, the happiness of winning and the tribulation of tests failed, the year 1982 will never be forgotten. Never!

Plans for the future were made mostly by seniors by going to the unemployment office; the recruiter; looking through college handbooks; visiting the career center; and many other sources.
